Bertha Maseko Clinical Research Nurse, Lilongwe

I'm from Malawi and found out about the Global Research Nurses' network when I attended a workshop in Lilongwe. Nursing was my dream career from my young age. When I was a little school girl, there were two things that inspired me most.

- The nursing Uniform and the cataput (stethoscopes) around their necks!!!
- How they managed to read those unreadable writings written by nurses and clinicians!!

As I grew up, in addition to the above, the nurses encouraging and comforting words when I was sick made me even more inspired to be a nurse.

AND THEN = I believed that nurses are never scared. Everyday somebody may be sick and I wanted to be there for them.

I was trained at St Luke's College of Nursing and then later went to the University of Malawi, Kamuzu College of Nursing. I'm a Registered Nurse Midwife.

I'm working with the University of North Carolina Project- Lilongwe (UNC PROJECT). It is a biomedical research institution. My role as a research nurse is recruitment of study participants, retention, and provision of clinical/ primary health services to study clients/patients.

I would love to hear more about what other research nurses are doing.
